

Celebration

Screaming cries fill my head with thoughts of soil fed by my bread and blood.

Will the petals flourish bright and do the worms fill plumb against a maiden flight.
History is held by the victors.

Carving smiles of delight
Crimson ribbons fall at night
As decorations of my frustrations.
Sometimes I want to die.